Parliament Hails DeGaulle

Urges Total Nuclear Ban

LONDON (AP)—French President Charles de Gaulle won the crowning ovation of his triumphant visit to Britain Thursday with a call for an end to the nuclear arms race.

France, he said, desires above all that nuclear weapons be destroyed and the "vehicles of death" that carry them be placed under surveillance, and she believes that East and West can live in peace together.

De Gaulle's speech combined history with oratory perhaps unmatched since Winston Churchill roused the free world to action 20 years ago. Churchill, 85 and feeble now, was there to honor his wartime ally.

Dramatic Timing

De Gaulle, tall and vigorous in sober morning attire, stood before a silk-covered throne on the gray stone steps that fill one end of Westminster Hall. Scarlet-robed Beefeaters from the Tower of London flanked him as an honor guard. A fanfare from trumpeters in medieval dress preceded his speech.

The soldier-president spoke with hardly a glance at his notes for 30 minutes. By an oratorical tour de force he contrived to end just as the 900-year-old hall vibrated with the last stroke of noon from the great bell of Big Ben.

The audience—members of both houses of Britain's Parliament—sat a moment in silence as though stunned. Then they burst into a roar of applause that lasted a full four minutes.

De Gaulle's theme was that Britain and France have a common destiny to work for peace. It brought him to this statement of French aims:

Control of Arms

"France believes that this peace can be attained only if the general fear of sudden annihilation is first removed."

"This involves the limitation and control of armaments by both camps."

"She (France) wishes above all that stocks of nuclear weapons be destroyed, that installations where they are made be used for other purposes, that rockets and aircraft capable of carrying them, as well as the fixed or floating bases from which these vehicles of death can be launched, be placed under surveillance."

"France would for her part be very happy to give up the tests of nuclear weapons."

and the capital expenditure she has undertaken in order to provide herself with the means possessed by others, as soon as these others cease to have them available."

He foresaw a lessening of enmity between the rival blocs of West and East, France, he said, hopes it will be achieved "in a peaceful atmosphere, through evolution conditioned on the one hand by the aspiration of human nature for liberty, and on the other by the pursuit of progress which demands efficiency."

Strained Levees Hold Back Flood

By The Associated Press

THE engorged Mississippi River north of St. Louis kept its immense force pressed against straining dikes Thursday, but they appeared to be holding.

Hundreds of tired volunteer levee workers kept busy bolstering sodden flood walls as the crest swelled from Quincy, Ill., into the Hannibal, Mo., area.

Further downstream, just north of St. Louis, the massive, rust-colored Missouri poured its mighty flood load into the Mississippi. The choked confluence slowed both.

48 Hours More
Army engineers said the dangerous high levels were expected to continue for 48 hours or more south of Keokuk, Iowa, although the high stage reached there Wednesday night was receding by inches.

This long period of stress remained the greatest danger along the reach of central Illinois and the northern Missouri border where containment saved millions of dollars in damage to farms and hamlets.

The meaning of breakthrough by the billions of gallons choking the rivers was shown by example north of Quincy where a levee failure engulfed 30,000 acres of farmland near Meyer, Ill., ruining good crop soil, winter wheat crops, machinery and household goods with silted water.

It was the aftermath of melting from the heavy spring snows which piled in drifted white bluffs throughout the river watersheds in the Plains and the Midwest last month.

Jointure Directors Seek To Slash School Budget

EAST STROUDSBURG Area Joint School directors last night at their joint meeting tore into a tentative budget set at $827,856—more than $100,000 over last year — trying to find ways of reducing the total figure.

Last year's budget figure was $712,135 for the entire jointure expenses, which in itself was $23,550 over its predecessor.

Figures Compared
Looking at their figures for this year, the directors found the amounts were $26,750 for general control, against 1959's $26,320; $576,230 for instruction, against 1959's $500,480; $70,185 for auxiliary agencies (transportation, etc.) as against $63,710 for 1959; $70,865 for operation, against $51,965 for 1959; maintenance cost estimated at $18,850, as against $14,000 last year; fixed charges of $53,865, against $46,960 for 1959, and capital outlay of $11,111 as compared to $9,000 for last year.

Percentages to be paid by the various local boards are as follows: East Stroudsburg, 45.21; Lehman, 14.47; Middle Smithfield, 13.44; Price, 2.43; Porter, 5.79, and Smithfield 18.66 which totals 100 percent.

Student enrollment, per district, shows the following percentages for payment on operational costs: East Stroudsburg, 62.93; Lehman, 4.65; Middle Smithfield, 9.02; Price, 1.75; Porter, 4.4 and Smithfield, 21.21.

Kindergarten Bus Costs
The tentative addition was made to the transportation figure of $7,500 for the transportation of kindergarten children to the schools starting in the fall.

East Stroudsburg Director Dr. Evan Reuss, along with several other members of the board, said the budget would have to be cut some way, since, he said, "the taxpayers would be asking why the budget was so high, and exactly what made it so high."

Additional meetings will be held by the Joint Committee with the Budget and Finance Committee in the immediate future to attempt ways to cut the total figure.

GOP Drafts Health Care Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — With an eye frankly on the national election campaign, eight Republican senators Thursday proposed a medical insurance plan for the aged.

At a news conference called to explain their bill, the Republican senators told reporters they regard health care for people over 65 as a major campaign issue, and said the GOP must come up with a positive program.

Their plan would cost a subscriber from nothing up to $13 a month, depending on income. State agencies, with federal help, would pay the deficit to give private insurance firms a full $13 a month premium for each person covered.

Need Recognized
Sen. John S. Cooper (R-Ky.), one of the sponsors, told the news conference there is no question about the need of older persons for help in meeting their medical and hospital costs.

Similar views were expressed by the other sponsors: Sens. Jacob K. Javits (N.Y.), George D. Aiken (Vt.), Clifford P. Case (N.J.), Hiram L. Fong (Hawaii), Hugh Scott (Pa.), Winston L. Prouty (Vt.) and Kenneth B. Keating (N.Y.).

Scott said he hopes doctors will "study this proposal earnestly before going off half-cocked in opposition."

All the GOP senators said they consider their plan far superior to the bill of Rep. Aime J. Forand (D-R.I.), which has been backed by many Democrats and labor unions. The Forand bill has been blocked in the House Ways and Means Committee, but Democrats refuse to concede it is dead.

Similar To Fleming's
It would incorporate a medical care program for retired persons into the Social Security setup, and raise Social Security taxes to pay for it.

The GOP senators' bill is along the lines of a program being developed by Secretary of Welfare Arthur S. Flemming, but its sponsors conceded it lacks administrative backing.

Javits estimated it would cost the federal government 480 million dollars a year and he expressed fear the administration would "bride" it at that.

Under the bill introduced Thursday, a subscriber with an income of less than $400 a year would pay nothing. Those with incomes of between $400 and $1,000 would pay 50 cents a month, and the rate would go on up from there until the person with more than $3,600 income would pay the full $13 a month premium.

The plan, which would be voluntary, would be administered by state agencies which would have to be set up by the states. Javits said the coverage would vary in accordance with the type of contract signed by each state agency.

The federal and state governments would share the extra cost, with the federal share ranging from 33 1/3 to 75 per cent, depending on the state's wealth.

Hearing Covers County Stretch

FIVE Monroe County representatives testified on behalf of early construction of the Keystone Shortway at a public hearing held yesterday in Hazleton.

They were among 21 persons who gave testimony at the hearing, the fifth in a series held by the State Highways Department.

More than 150 civic, industrial and education representatives attending the Shortway, which will run from Stroudsburg through Sharon, is necessary for the economic growth of the northern half of the state and especially the distressed area cutting through the anthracite region.

The hearing was called specifically to discuss the 30.9-mile stretch beginning at Crescent Lake, Monroe County, and extending to Drums, located just north of Hazleton and west of Route 309 in Luzerne County. The cost is estimated at $23,600,000.

Representatives of Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co., Split Rock Club and Pocono Lake Preserve said they were in favor of building the Shortway, but they asked consideration with respect to the specific route the road will take in relation to their own properties.

Defense Highway
Clifford Cramer, chairman of the Monroe County Shortway Charter, testified as to the importance of the 291-mile superhighway from both the defense and the resort viewpoints.

He presented a resolution passed by the Monroe County Commissioners pointing out that completion of the Shortway will provide the nation with a sorely needed east-west military highway and also stressing that improvement in the access to the Pocono resort area is necessary. The Shortway, he said, will provide that improvement.

County Commissioners Willard Quick and Stanley Rader attended the hearing but did not testify.

Burgess Edward Doran of Stroudsburg and Sterling Cramer, borough manager of East Stroudsburg, testified that their borough councils were 100 percent in favor of the Shortway and that it was needed to speed the industrial development of the two communities.

Sought By 1964
William Bridger, who represented both the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce and the Vacation Bureau, urged that the Shortway be constructed by 1964 to handle the heavy flow of traffic traveling to New York for the World's Fair.

M. E. Leffler spoke on behalf of the Pocono Mountains Motor Club and the Delaware Water Gap Chamber of Commerce. Besides being a great boon to the motoring public the Shortway will make it easier for the area to attract new industries because of the improved transportation facilities, Leffler said.

Nelson E. Miller, general manager of Pocono Lake Preserve, asked that the road be located south of the preserve to avoid damage to the large number of residences in the area. Preliminary maps indicate the road will be some three-quarters of a mile south of the preserve.

John Adams, representing Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co. and Split Rock Club, expressed concern about the Shortway's location with respect to Moseystown Road leading off Route 940 to the lodge. An engineer said an underpass will carry the road beneath the new highway. Adams also said a bridge pier will be built in Tunkhannock Creek and he asked whether this would harm fishing at that location.

Sale Of Lots
Mention was made of the possible sale of 300 lots in an area south of Route 940 on Tobyhanna Creek and a proposal to develop a peat moss tract in the same general area.

C. E. Noyes, executive secretary of the Keystone Shortway Authority, praised the Highways Department for expediting of the public hearings and said the five held to date encompassed 102 miles of the 291-mile highway. He also emphasized the lack of good east-west transportation facilities—rail, air and highway—in the northern half of the state.

State Sen. Z. H. Confair, Shortway president, spoke of the difficulty of moving missiles and other military equipment over existing highways due to low bridges and said this could be overcome with construction of the Shortway.

Hazleton, Nanticoke and Wilkes-Barre spokesmen told of industrial development programs under way in their communities. They said many industries are considering locating in Northeastern Pennsylvania on the strength of promise of adequate highways so their products could reach Eastern ports and the West rapidly.

Start In 18 Months
Notes from the hearing will be transcribed and submitted to high officials in the Highways Department and the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads. If approved without hitch, the 30.9-mile stretch will be scheduled for final design and the awarding of contracts. Under normal procedure, construction should start in about a year and a half, a highway spokesman explained.

Civil Rights Bill Closer To Passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate brought its civil rights bill almost to the point of passage Thursday, shutting off all further amendments.

An indefinite amount of speech-making remained, however, both by the outnumbered Southern opponents of the bill and by its supporters from the North and West.

Late Thursday there came a time when no one had an amendment to offer, and the Senate proceeded with the third reading of the bill.

This meant no more amendments could be offered.

Voting Section Saved
One amendment got through Thursday, after the Senate rejected 73-18 a proposal to kill the whole voting section of the bill.

The amendment, adopted 79-12, was designed to settle fears that in helping Southern Negroes to vote, the bill might discriminate against white voters.

Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, the Senate Democratic leader, gave assurance there would be no roll calls Thursday night. He called for a long session Friday, however, and one on Saturday if necessary, in an effort to pass the bill. The Senate is now in its eighth week of considering it.

Johnson said he knew many senators opposed to the bill, and some of those who favored it, still had speeches they wanted to make.

Ellender Amendment
The first vote Thursday was on a table, and thus kill, an amendment by Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D-La.) to strike out the bill's registration and voting section.

This section provides for a system under which federal judges, or referees appointed by them, could register qualified Negroes as voters in areas where the court had found a pattern of discrimination existed.

Under this section, as the bill came from the House, if time before an election were short, a court could authorize an applicant to vote provisionally, subject to a later decision on his qualifications which would decide whether the vote would be counted.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) and other Southerners protested this would mean a federal judge could register Negroes up to the day before an election.

Tax Returns Due Easter Monday
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Because of Good Friday, taxpayers will have until Monday, April 18, to get their 1959 returns to the Internal Revenue Service, an IRS spokesman said Thursday.

Good Friday is not a national holiday but district offices of the IRS abide by state holidays and thus the deadline moves to midnight of the next business day, the IRS district director's office reported.

Area Road Improvements Aired By High Ways' Cesare

BANGOR—Projected highway improvements in the area were discussed by Victor Cesare, district engineer of the State Highway Department, at a dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club at the Colonial Hotel.

The most immediate project, he noted, is resurfacing of the highway between Bangor and Pen Argyl. He said that a survey showed that this road is traveled by 6,500 cars daily and that the number probably will double within the next 20 years.

Relocation of Route 90 also is contemplated, he stated, although there is no indication when this work will be started. Money was cited as the main problem. More immediate, probably, will be the improvement of Route 90 on this side of the mountain, making it comparable with the Monroe County improvement.

Resurfacing of the Bangor-East Bangor highway also is in the offing. He explained where the tax monies supporting the highway program originates and said that the state attempts to plan roads 20 years in advance. It would be impractical to extend planning beyond 20 years and wasteful to plan on a more limited basis of time.

11 Districts
Cesare told how the state highway department is divided into 11 districts. The local district, with headquarters at Allentown, embraces Berks, Schuylkill, Lehigh, Carbon, Northampton and Monroe Counties. There is a separate office in each county and he is responsible for each office.

In describing projected road improvements in the area over the next 4-5 years, he observed that the development of an area through highway construction cannot be over-emphasized.

Limited access highways are the answer to traffic problems, he declared. All major routes will be 4-lane limited access highways, tying the area in with New York, Philadelphia and Scranton. Next will be the development of adequate feeder roads. In time, he predicted, high speed highways will make this area suburban to both New York City and Philadelphia.

Anthony Trigiani, program chairman, introduced the speaker. George Remagen gave the response. Clair H. Pelly, president, was in charge. Dr. Anson Hamm offered the invocation.

Witnesses Set To Hold Special Service Sunday

JEHOVAH'S Witnesses of the East Stroudsburg Congregation will celebrate the Memorial of Christ's death Sunday, April 10, at 7:30 p.m. Stephen Bortlik, presiding minister of the local congregation, made the announcement last night. The congregation will celebrate it at 7:00 p.m. the same evening.

"April 10 this year corresponds with Nisan 14 of the calendar used by the Jewish nation in Jesus' day," Mr. Bortlik explained. "It is the anniversary of the betrayal and death of Christ."

Emphasizing the importance of this date in Jehovah's Witnesses' calendar, Mr. Bortlik stated that a peak attendance is expected not only at the local Kingdom Hall, Milford Road, E. Stroudsburg, and the Brodheadsville Kingdom Hall, McMichael Road, Brodheadsville, but in all the 19,982 congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses around the world. The Memorial attendance world wide last year, according to the 1960 Yearbook, official report of Jehovah's Witnesses, was one and a quarter million.

The Memorial discourse will be given locally by Mr. Fred Severud, minister of Jehovah's Witnesses, who has made a comprehensive study of the Bible and who has been active in Bible teaching and preaching. Mr. Severud said he will draw especially on 1 Corinthians II: verses 25 and 26 and Matthew 26:17-27 as well as other scriptures to show why the Witnesses celebrate this event only once each year and what the celebration means to them.

All meetings of Jehovah's Witnesses are free and open to the public. Mr. Bortlik said, with no collection taken at any time.

Mental Health Workshop For Law Officers

PLANS for a workshop on mental health for law enforcement officers were outlined at a meeting of directors of Monroe County Mental Health Assn. last night in the office at 616 Main St.

The workshop, designed to acquaint policemen with how to recognize the mentally disturbed person and what steps should be taken in dealing with such a person, will be held later this month, probably in Monroe County Courthouse.

Henry McCool, county probation officer, is in charge of arranging the program which will be highlighted by a panel discussion.

Members of the panel will include Dist. Atty. James R. Marsh, a captain or lieutenant from Troop A headquarters of the State Police at Hazleton, a person or persons from Allentown State Hospital and possibly a representative of the state or county mental health group.

Identical morning and afternoon programs are planned to permit the maximum attendance by on-duty policemen. A total of 114 state, local, auxiliary and special police and constables will be invited to attend.

Plans were also discussed for a series of coffee hour meetings in communities throughout the county during National Mental Health Week, the first week in May.

Nine of the sessions have been scheduled so far. A brief program prepared by the state mental health association will be presented at each meeting.

A report was heard on a recent meeting of some members of the Monroe County Ministerial Assn. at which Rev. Charles Staples, who is currently interning at Byberry State Hospital, Philadelphia, spoke on his experiences with mentally disturbed patients.

The resignation of Rev. Robert Galligan as a member of the board of directors was accepted with regret. Father Galligan said his resignation was due to an increase in parish duties, particularly new school construction.

The board approved a proposal to invite a member of the county ministerial association as an auditor at future directors' meetings to report back to the other ministers on the association's program.

It was announced that officers and directors will be elected at the May membership meeting.

Judge Davis Praises Troopers But Frees Defendants In Cases Probed By Policemen

JUDGE Fred W. Davis praised two state troopers yesterday while freeing defendants in the cases they investigated on appeals from summary convictions.

The jurist told Clement W. Heist, then stationed at the Mt. Pocono barracks and now secretary of the Pocono Mountains Motor Club, that he should be commended for his honest testimony against Melvin L. Johnson, Scotrun, appealing a summary conviction for reckless driving.

Heist testified that on Jan. 21 of this year, he saw a car traveling south on Route 611 near Mt. Pocono, turned around and gave chase and then found Johnson's car wrecked beside the highway.

Heist said he assumed the southbound car he saw, which he described as traveling at a fast rate of speed, was Johnson's, but said he could not be certain.

Judge Davis told Heist it would have been very easy for the former trooper to say that the two cars were one and the same.

Decision No Reflection

In freeing Russell Kresge, Jr., also appealing a summary conviction for reckless driving, Judge Davis told Trooper Donald W. Good the decision was in no way a reflection upon his honesty and competency, but merely a matter of law.

Judge Davis reserved decision on a motion by Atty. Edwin Krawitz to quash a charge of failure to yield the right of way against Ralph Conahan, also appealing a summary conviction.

Krawitz said law requires that a justice of the peace submit a transcript of the hearing within 15 days after the hearing is held if an appeal is contemplated.

Krawitz admitted that he could not find a case in which such a motion had been granted, and said that the courts generally appear to have ruled that the 15 day period is directory rather than mandatory.

It was pointed out that Conahan was involved in an accident on May 18 of last year, had a hearing on June 18 and the transcript was not forwarded by the justice of the peace until Dec. 3.

Reserves Action

While reserving decision on Krawitz' motion, Judge Davis heard testimony in the case.

Johnson was represented by John J. Pentz, Jr., while Atty. Lester Brown represented Kresge.

Three non-support actions, against Frank E. Bush, Sr., Ballard T. Wade and Russell Paul, were continued to the May term of court.

William J. Maiorielow, directed to pay $42.50 a week for the support of his four children after an agreement of the parties was confirmed to Monroe County Jail after he told the court he could not pay.

Raymond E. Costenbader, found guilty of contempt of court for failure to comply with a support order, was purged of contempt after paying his arrearage and costs.

Stroud Union To Get $230,531

Record Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG—A $230,531 school subsidy payment will be forwarded later this month to Stroud Union School District, the State Department of Public Instruction said today.

The Stroud Union state aid payment is part of $318,127.48 due two third-class school districts in Monroe County. A second payment, in the amount of $61,596.41, will go to East Stroudsburg Borough School District.

Second Semi-Annual

The payments represent the second semi-annual state reimbursement for the 1959-60 school year to Pennsylvania's first, second and third class school districts and are due in April of each year.

Basically the state aid is for local teacher pay subsidies.

Reimbursements to fourth class school districts in the county were made last month.

Tentative Plan For New Gravel Place Hearing

COUNTY Commissioner John R. Lesoine, State Representative Van D. Yetter and attorneys representing political subdivisions and other parties yesterday set up a tentative plan for further Public Utility Commission hearings on "Gravel Place Crossing."

Meeting at Monroe County courthouse the group set in motion details to stop the proposed closing of the crossing in Stroud Twp. via talks with the PUC.

The plan calls for letters to be sent by the attorneys, to the Chairman of the Public Utility Commission, Harrisburg, from all parties. However, the letters from Monroe County Commissioners and Stroud Township will offer a tentative sum of money toward the installation of the automatic safety device at the crossing.

The amount tentatively stated by the Commissioners is $9,000 and Stroud Township's amount was $4,000. Both of these amounts will have to be acted on by the parties individually and then no definite action will be taken until word is received from the PUC.

In testimony offered by railroad officials, at one of the two PUC hearings, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad stated they would contribute $9,000 towards the installation of the safety devices.

Yetter placed several calls to Harrisburg and spoke to people in the offices of the Public Utilities Commission and Department of Highways, obtaining information and advice to speed up the procedure.

What Happened?

Monroe Countains were shocked yesterday to learn that a gang of 14 teen-age boys from Barrett and Paradise Townships had been accused of at least 30 burglaries and a number of other crimes extending over a two-year period.

Formed five years ago as "The American Zeres," mimicking something taken from a German book, the group started out as an organization for gang fighting, but later turned to burglary, larceny, arson and malicious mischief.

The boys operated army style, promoting their members from private up through the ranks to five star general. Promotions were based on the number of incidents in which each boy participated.

The incidents had been under investigation by state and local police in the area for 22 months. The authorities were able to piece bits of evidence obtained while checking on crimes ranging from burglaries at Summer cottages and business places to thefts of liquor and destruction of small bridges, by fire in one case and with a home-made bomb in another.

The boys, in the 15 to 17-year age bracket, are charged with taking articles worth more than $5,000. Some of the loot was recovered, police said after apprehending the gang.

The loot included knives, revolvers, rifles, bayonets, cameras, projectors, silverware, clocks, tools, electrical appliances and money.

We are accustomed to reading of teen-age gangs operating in crowded metropolitan districts, but we never thought that such groups would find a fertile field in our own area.

The news startled virtually every person in the county and prompted many to question how such a group could operate so long without coming under suspicion. Most, if not all, of the boys came from good homes and have seldom wanted for anything.

That they should resort to such deeds should serve a good purpose in awakening all parents to the dangers and temptations facing every growing child.

A searching study of the underlying causes behind the gang incident should be made and the public apprised. In this way, we will become better equipped to cope with the problems and take effective steps to safeguard our children.

George Sokolsky Says . . .

Brains, Character

All of a sudden, there has been a deluge of biographies of Presidential hopefuls. There have been at least four hard-cover books on Richard Nixon alone, none of them portraying the man as a human being because no one can be either so perfect or so unsold.

Apparently, each candidate for the Presidency finds it necessary to prove that he has done great things, that he has a common touch, that he is superior in brain-power but is not snobbish about it. Little is said to establish that imponderable described as character.

In the old days, before I.B.M. machines did our thinking, bankers lent money on character rather than on pledges. Pawn-brokers insisted on pledges and that differentiated one from the other.

Character to a banker meant that the borrower possessed a quality of personality, an ethic, a morality which was so perfectly geared that even if he failed in the venture, he would somehow pay his debts. In fact, the man of character had such standing that a banker might, in those distant days, put good money after bad.

Curiously, character as a word started out to mean something else altogether. It was originally an instrument for grading. In China, it is an English word for ideographs which are the symbolized figures they use for words.

This second use also came down into English back in the 15th Century when character meant a distinctive mark, a stamp. The word then went through many developments, mostly figurative, until today, it means really that which marks off one person from another.

When a word has so many different and confusing meanings, it is probably true that when one speaks the word, character, he has a different portrait to convey than his listener receives, but this all understood; if one says that a man possesses character, it is a favorable remark. He is marked out as a decent person who is to be trusted.

Presidential candidates require not only character but reputation. That is something altogether different. Reputation means the estimate or esteem in which a person is held.

A person may have a good or a bad reputation. For instance, President Eisenhower had a good reputation when he ran for President and still has one but Al Capone never had a good reputation. No man is likely to be nominated for the Presidency unless his reputation at the moment is good.

What his reputation will be when the history of the period is written, no one knows. Men who were outstanding while they lived sometimes receive only a footnote in history or are not even noted.

The various candidates' biographies are campaign literature. They are designed to depict an individual as possessing a superior reputation for wonderful achievement and for noble aspirations.

The reading is generally for juveniles, for truly few men are worthy of biographical study until many decades after they have been laid to rest. Then their deeds and their character may be studied objectively.

Finally, a biography must be written by one who has no interest, vested or hopeful, in the career of the subject. For instance, some of the various Nixon biographers sound as though they hope that when Nixon shall have achieved his ambition, he will design to remember the biographer. Politicians never remember their benefactors. It is unethical. Politicians are pragmatists. They do what is necessary. They associate with those who can at the moment promote them. It is wiser to serve God than a politician; one is not likely to suffer heartaches. Socrates in his last moments said:

"... And the difference between him (the partisan) and me at the present moment is merely this—that whereas he seeks to convince his hearers that what he says is true, I am rather seeking to convince myself; to convince my hearers is a secondary matter with me."

But Socrates was no politician. Of politicians it is sufficient to know that one of them will be nominated by each party and that the two men will travel about the country belaboring each other; that, as things are in 1960, one will not be fundamentally different from the other.

It is, for instance, established that Senator Jacob Javits will support Richard Nixon whom he describes as a middle-of-the-roader. What a distressing thing to say about any man! It sounds like cancelling out.

Love Among the Stars. Cupid, the gay ragamuffin, creates stories out of moonlight, rainbows and shadows. Quite often, the strange romantic tales are written in the stars. For example, in a national weekly, Debbie Reynolds expressed her affection and respect for Eddie Fisher. She concedes that "maybe Eddie needed Elizabeth more than me," and adds: "Elizabeth and I were good friends and I'm sure we will be again." Incidentally, the headlines and heartbreak might have been avoided if Eddie had listened to Mike Todd. After three dates with Debbie, he decided on marriage. Todd counseled: "Eddie, you're not ready for marriage. You know nothing about life yet, less about women." Subsequently, Eddie learned about life and women, of course.

No writer of fiction could conjure the more bizarre aspects of love and marriage. As another startling case in point, there's the story of the Cary Grants. The star recently informed London reporters that he and his estranged wife, Betsy Drake, adore each other so much while living apart—they are considering a divorce. Why? Grant is considering a divorce on the theory that it would inspire a remarriage. "Then," explained the star, "we could try living together happily." You figure it out.

The offset aspects of the oldest emotion have been personified by Brigitte Bardot. Her initial marriage to movie director Roger Vadim was unconditional, to put it mildly. While movie-making, Bardot would casually inform her director husband that she planned spending an evening with one of the actors in the cast. He would generously reply: "All right, do as you wish, have fun."

Shortly after her divorce from Vadim, Bardot publicly expressed her passion for Jean-Louis Trintignant, who co-starred with her in a movie. And here another ludicrous climax was reached. Ex-husband Vadim directed Brigitte and Jean-Louis in torrid love scenes. Bardot described it all as "funny." (Hilarious.)

In recalling past romantic entanglements, Lana Turner recently detailed her marital experience with Artie Shaw. They decided to get married after a single date justlike that. As Miss Turner said: "When Artie took my hand and asked me to marry him, I must have been numb in the head. I said yes. All he did was rush to the phone and arrange for a plane to take us to Vegas for the wedding." While awaiting the plane, Shaw kissed his bride-to-be for the first time. Recapturing the incident, Lana declared: "He might have been my brother. It was one of those quick embarrassed kind of kisses." Surprisingly, the marriage lasted as long as four months.

The strangest — and most headlined — romance co-starred Frankie and Ava. Their marriage began with a battle with news-photos and the war continued several years. Months after hostilities ended, Miss Gardner issued the final communique. It stated in part: "Frank and I spent the first months we were married learning to know, each other. Oh, there were warnings! I'm possessive and jealous, and so is he. He has a fine Italian temper that explodes as often as mine, and he has the irritating habit of walking out of the room in the middle of an argument, leaving me burning inside. When he was down and out, he was so sweet, but when he got back on top again, it was hell." Miss Gardner added a candid note: "Maybe if I had been willing to share Frank with other women, we could have been happier."

Oddly, Frank and Ava are now good friends.

Read actor George Sanders' memoirs (in Good House-keeping) and you get the impression that his marriage with Zsa Zsa was shattered by her insistence on spending so much time under hair-dryers, of all things. There were more valid reasons, of course. . . . Zsa Zsa and George were in Paris when she met Porfirio Rubirosa, who was then the Dominican ambassador to France. George returned to the U. S. and Zsa Zsa remained with Porfirio.

Sanders now flips: "While I have always been a staunch supporter of international accord, I found it a little hard to believe relations between France and the Dominican Republic had become so critical as to require the wholehearted cooperation of Hungarians."

How Brief Is An Outline?

Washington — In government, one of the most misused words in recent years has been "briefing." This is the process by which government officials receive basic information on a subject they are about to deal with.

Some of these briefings take hours, others take days. They bely the very meaning of the word.

However, something new was added recently in the area of government usage. An agency was about to embark on a study, another activity that abounds virtually unlimited in Washington.

On the morning the study was to be discussed, participants found an outline on their desks. It was 264 pages long!

Short Takes — Outside of an incumbent President running for re-election, no one in Washington can remember a situation paralleling that of Richard M. Nixon, where there is no opposition in the field.

When Senator Stuart Symington (D, Missouri), recently announced his candidacy for his party's presidential nomination, he sent chummy letters to all of the prominent Democrats in official Washington. Inevitably, somebody goofed, for the "Dear Joe" letters arrived in the mailboxes of a number of prominent Republicans, as well.

Senator Mike S. Monroney (D, Oklahoma), succeeded in making his point in a political discussion by observing that he had heard of thousands of "Eisenhower Democrats," but never a "Nixon Democrat."

A government official remarked that one can safely say that women's girdles inched up last year. He is a Department of Labor expert on consumer costs and he was talking about price, not movement.

The Allen-Scott Report

Rocky Still In Race

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — Gov. Nelson Rockefeller will soon make it very evident that the Republican presidential nomination is still very much on his mind.

With this year's session of the New York Legislature concluded, Rockefeller is preparing to keep himself in the forefront of the national political arena in two significant ways:

In the next several months, in key centers throughout the country, he will make a series of speeches on major domestic and foreign issues and at the request of North Dakota's Gov. John Davis will campaign for him in the June 28 special election to fill the seat of the late Senator William Langer.

To close Lieutenants, the New York Governor is evening his intent interest in the GOP presidential picture in still another significant way.

National Chairman Thurston Morton was politely but firmly rebuffed when he proposed that funds raised last year to boost Rockefeller's presidential candidacy be turned over to the National Committee.

These unspent state and local contributions total more than $250,000. In Washington alone, around $50,000 is on deposit. Morton would like very much to get this money for the National Committee. But that was flatly rejected after Rockefeller advisers discussed it with him.

Foremost among them was Maxwell Rabb, former secretary of President Eisenhower's cabinet and now a New York attorney.

It was explained to Morton that Rockefeller felt this money was forthcoming for a specific political purpose, and that it would be unfair to the contributors to use it for something else without their permission.

Governor Davis particularly sought Rockefeller's assistance in his close race against Democratic Rep. Quentin Burdick. The North Dakotan made it clear he considered Rockefeller the one prominent Republican who could effectively electorally in that predominantly rural state.

Also under consideration by Rockefeller are requests from other GOP state and congressional candidates that he campaign for them. The New Yorkers' aides are letting it be known he is willing to do that "wherever he thinks he can do some real good."

Three important speeches already are on Rockefeller's calendar.

The first will be in Philadelphia, on April 22, before the World Affairs Council. Another will be in Chicago around June 1, and the third later that month on the West Coast. Other addresses are under consideration.

The Rockefeller talks will deal with the highly controversial question of the rate of growth of U. S. economy; the even more hotly disputed issue of defense expenditures; and relations with Russia, especially disarmament and the continued suspension of nuclear tests.

Rockefeller will urge that planning immediately be started for a "peace economy." He will advocate that comprehensive studies be undertaken on the effects of disarmament on the economy of the U. S. and the West as a whole.

Chicago Convention — Vice President Nixon is thinking of having all the living Republican Presidents and presidential nominees deliver speeches at the Chicago convention. Aides of Nixon say he favors the convention program including "featured talks" by Presidents Eisenhower and Hoover, and 1936 and 1944-48 standard bearers Governors Alf Landon and Thomas Dewey.

Liberties At Stake

By J. M. Roberts

Associated Press News Analyst

One of the most startling aspects of the current racial troubles in South Africa is the assumption by the Afrikaner government that, after forcing the Negroes into enclaves to live, it has the right to force them out again to work.

Some years ago there was a great uproar in the United States when investigations pointed out the extent to which many poor whites and Negroes were bound to the tenant farms they worked, by debt and other immobilizing economic factors.

The cry of peonage swept the country. Yet the responsibility lay with individuals, operating within a social and economic order which was and is still seeking humane solutions to its problems.

In South Africa the conditions are produced by direct and declared government policy, acting in extension of attitudes established by the white community.

The blacks suffer from an immobilizing passportist, and from many other economic deterrents which deny them movement and a free choice of jobs.

If they seek to use the weapon of general strike—a weapon long available to workers in free countries—they are liable to beatings from police with clubs and rubber whips, and even to shooting.

Thus the climax comes to 12 years of a policy operating since 1948, when the Afrikaners won by politics the Boer War which Britain thought she had won with guns in 1902.

What is the essential difference, then, between lashing men to work when they do not wish to go, and the practice of slavery in the United States 100 years ago?

The African blacks are paid wages of a sort, which the American slaves were not.

The bodies of the African blacks are not commercial commodities. Those are the major differences.

As usual when governments resort to restriction of human rights, the restrictions tend to extend themselves beyond the original objects of hatred and to penetrate the whole political body.

Now even members of the South African Parliament are not permitted to visit the Negro enclaves to see for themselves what is going on. Will the liberties of the white opposition be the next object of government attack?

It has often happened that way.

Veteran's Guide

Q — My husband, a World War II veteran, passed away recently. Since he had no service-connected disability, I was ineligible for VA death pension as his widow. I understand that under a new pension law I may now be eligible. Is this correct?

A — Yes. Widows of World War II and Korea veterans may be eligible for pensions even if their husbands had no service-connected disabilities at the time of their death. This new pension program, however, does not go in effect until July 1.

Q — With my pension check, I received a special form and an information pamphlet from VA. This was to help me decide if I want to come under the new pension program. I did the calculations VA asked me to do, and it looks like the new system is best for me. Will VA check my computations?

A — Yes. That is the purpose of the special election form you received. You were asked to compute how much you expect to get under the new system, for this year as well as for the next year. VA is now checking over the election forms. If it appears you have made the wrong choice, you will get another chance to decide.

Q — I'm a Korea veteran with GI term insurance. Please give me the details about the new-type lower-cost term insurance I've been hearing about.

A — The new-type term insurance is a 10-year term policy. It costs less than the old-type term insurance because it is issued to younger people. The new-type term insurance is available to veterans who are under 40 years of age at the time of their discharge.

Small Town Appeal

Announcement by the Campbell Soup Company that it would locate all future plant sites in smaller towns emphasizes a trend among major industries. They are quietly deserting crowded cities with their high production costs and scattering to lower cost rural areas. Incidentally, they are belatedly disseminating their plants to avoid prime nuclear targets in the bigger industrial complexes.

Reasons for this trend are complex. Space in most big cities is now at a premium. Industrial sites are costly. Taxes are high. Traffic is a major problem, particularly the need for adequate parking facilities. The first trend was to suburbs of metropolitan cities, but it was soon found that costs were at least as high there as in the cities, and transportation at least as serious.

Many factories located in urban areas are worn out and outmoded. The cost of replacing them with new modern buildings at their present sites would be prohibitive. Not only do rural areas offer a ready solution for this replacement problem, but they also have abundant labor at lower wages because of lower costs of living.

The small towns that are organized to take advantage of this trend now can get as much industry as their plant sites and labor pool will absorb.

The Pennsylvania Story

Clue To 1962 Race

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Pennsylvania's top Republican strategists, already looking beyond the April 26 primary election to the all-important November showdown do not quite share the optimism voiced by many of their colleagues — especially insofar as Pennsylvania is concerned.

The fact that long time GOP stalwart Richard M. Nixon is seeking the White House bid — unopposed and with a great degree of unanimity insofar as party pros are concerned — unquestionably is one of the most favorably influencing factors on the GOP side.

However, there is considerably more to the picture than this in relation to the Keystone State scene. Support by party regulars is one thing — support by non-party voters (independents, etc.) is something quite different, especially with the GOP nationally on the underdog registrationwise.

Historically, Pennsylvania has always been a politically explosive state — one of the most boisterous perhaps in this respect outside of top-ranking neighboring New York State.

Factors have been persistently present in Pennsylvania that have not been found prevalent in most other states, or at least not to the degree prevailing in the Keystone State.

For example the large population of Pennsylvania, the economic diversity ranging from agriculture to industry, the wide range of nationalities,

Where a Man is Never a Stranger!

Ever see this gentleman before?

We would guess that you haven't. And yet, we'll wager that you sense something familiar about him as you watch him step confidently from the driver's seat.

For the truth is—no man is ever wholly a stranger to those who behold him in the distinguished company of a new Cadillac motor car.

Dignified, impressive and substantial—it proclaims him a man of achievement who is very likely known and respected in his world of affairs.

Beautiful, tasteful and elegant—it announces him as a person of judgment who selects his possessions with exceptional care and taste.

Soundly built, economical and dependable—it indicates his personal wisdom and his constant concern with the important practical values.

To be sure, the honor which a Cadillac does its owner is the result of the honor which owners themselves have conferred on the car. For those who choose Cadillac share these qualities to such a degree that they are expected of whomever sits at its wheel.

This unique reward comes, of course, in addition to Cadillac's merits as a motor car—its brilliant performance and ride... its remarkable quietness in operation... and its miraculous comfort and ease of handling.

We suggest you visit your Cadillac dealer very soon. He'll see to it that you're no longer a stranger to the 1960 "car of cars". Why not make an appointment today?

Dear Abby

Addicted And Troubled

Dear Abby: As I sit here in the County Jail waiting to be transferred to the State Prison for a narcotics charge, I am terribly troubled.

You see, Miss Abby, I must leave my 17-year-old sister behind and she will be alone because we have no parents or living relatives. My young sister is also so addicted to the drug and I know that when I go to prison she will have to get money for the habit and when you need money for the habit you will do anything to get it. Please advise me what to do. Thank you.

Sincerely yours, W. F.

Dear W. F.: Tell the sheriff that you must talk to a clergyman. Then tell the clergyman your story. He will arrange for treatments to cure your sister of the drug habit. He will also offer her spiritual guidance to help her to a better way of life. Bless you and your sister. And good luck!

Dear Abby: I am 18 and my boyfriend is 19. He is as sweet and thoughtful as a boy can be. He is the greatest as far as personality goes. The only thing wrong with him is that he leaves me home every Saturday night. I guess it may sound strange to you, but he dates me every Friday night and Sunday night, but Saturday night is his night with the guys. No girls, but that doesn't help me.

How can I make him see that I want to go out on Saturday night without sounding like an ungrateful girl?

BEV

Dear Bev: If you don't want to sound like an "ungrateful girl" — stop acting like one. Keep your lip zipped or you'll be staying home every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

attention to it, so it died. Well, what does anybody do with a dead plant? I threw it out.

His wife came to the office yesterday and said she wanted to see how the plant was doing. (Personally, I think she came to look me over.) Instead of telling her the plant died, I lied to her and told her I had taken it home.

My boss tells me it would be nice if I'd bring the plant back to the office in case his wife drops in again to see it. What do I do now?

TRAPPED

Dear Trapped: Fess up and tell your boss the plant died. Confidential to "Too scared to tell": Please tell your mother or father at once! They are your best friends (no matter what you think!) and they will help you.

Green Thumb

Pruning Roses Shouldn't Be Baffling Job

PRUNING ROSES: There's no reason why rose pruning should be a baffling job. Let's take hybrid teas for example. If you look at the bushes you'll find the canes have been blackened down to a certain point. Your first job is to cut out all dead or diseased wood.

Just take a sharp pair of clippers and cut old stems that have not been injured, back to about 8 inches from the ground. Any wood that has been injured should be cut off to the nearest live leaf bud. At the same time trim out any weak branches. Any wood over two years old should be cut out to encourage new, healthy canes. Leave anywhere from 3 to 6 strong canes on plants which grow 3 to 6 feet tall.

Prune out canes which cross or interfere with each other. Also remove any shoots which start from below the line of the graft. These shoots are from the root stock and are not the same as the rest of the bush. If allowed to grow they'll produce "wild" growth and may eventually crowd out the desirable growth.

Prune floribundas in same manner as Hybrid teas, leaving the stems 12 to 15 inches long. If taller plants are wanted you leave the stems at the maximum height of 15". For tree roses, prune as you do hybrid teas, cutting the branches to within 6 to 8 inches of the "crown" or to the top of the trunk.

This encourages a compact, vigorous new growth and you should do the job immediately after the tree is set upright in the spring.

For climbing roses, cut out the dead and injured wood now, and in July (after flowering is finished) you can remove some of the older and thickened canes. The old canes which have produced flowers are cut close to the roots of the plants in mid-summer.

Plastic Bags

Here's this week's reader tip: "I use large plastic bags to cover my peonies and iris to protect them against rains and winds which often ruin the blossoms."

I also find that plastic bags are unbeatable for mixing potting plant soils. Top knotted, I tumble the bag of soil on the table and I can see when the soil is mixed properly. Keep sending me your plastic bag tips, friends.

DILLS: Here's an easily grown herb ideal for flavoring and the dried branches can be used for making Dill pickles. A packet of seed will cost you about 15 cents and will sow a row 10 feet long.

Sow seeds in rows 2 feet apart and thin the plants to 4 inches apart in the row. Sow seed in early spring or later. Don't miss out on this useful aromatic herb in your garden this year!

Question Box

Question of the Week: F. N. of Stroudsburg: "Too late did I learn that hungry rabbits had nibbled away on the bark of my young fruit trees. There isn't a strip of bark left for two feet, from the ground up. Are the trees ruined or can something be done?"

Mice and rabbits have ruined many trees this year, due to snows which have permitted the pests to work above protective guards. If the tree is completely girdled that means it'll die.

You may be surprised to find it budding out and flowering this spring, but this is done at the expense of stored food and the tree cannot live longer than one season, if completely girdled. You should pull the tree out and replace it.

Or, if you wish you can resort to bridge grafting the fruit trees. To do this you must select solid wood from strictly dormant trees. You can use dormant water sprouts, or wood from last year's growth.

Duchess, Snow McIntosh and Wealthy varieties are usually the most hardy and most desirable kinds of scion wood. Keep the twigs wrapped in plastic bags. Never allow them to dry out. Grafting is best done when the bark slips or just before the buds start up.

Scions or the twigs are tacked in such a way as to "bridge" over the wounds and allow sap to rise and keep the tree alive. After you do the grafting, be sure to cover the entire graft with wax. Mix one lb. of rosin, three ozs. of linseed oil and five lbs. of paraffin to make a good liquid wax. Apply with a brush.

D. R. of Long Pond: "Why is it I can't raise pepper plants from seed? I sowed Penn Wonder in a flat of muck soil plus vermiculite. Only a few of the seeds germinated. I can't understand why."

Pepper seed must have plenty of heat for germination. Try to keep the seeds in a temperature of 80 degs. or so, until they start to germinate. After that you can move them to a cooler room.

Free: Send me a self-addressed stamped envelope for a free copy of my helpful bulletin, How To Grow Big Fat Peppers. Our guide tells how to make stubborn peppers bear. It also tells you which varieties to select.

Our bulletin debunks such old wives' tales such as planting peppers close together is needed for fruit setting. Our bulletin has helped thousands of discouraged pepper-growers raise big chunky peppers.

So if your plants raise "lots of leaves but no fruit," better send for your free copy. Be sure to enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

One never knows where one may come in useful. For instance, I am playing a very vital role in the county federation meeting picture at the right. Seems the best background was just in front of the swinging door leading from the kitchen and I was sent, like Molly Bar-The-Door, to make sure that the waitresses didn't come swinging through too soon.

Would have made a good picture, though, I keep thinking wistfully, to catch the state, district and county presidents and the girl-of-the-year all being spanked by a swinging door. And, you know what? I'll bet after the initial surprise they would have laughed too.

Certainly the state president laughed heartily enough at the Junior's lampooning women's clubs and federation. I meant to leave when I could say "This is where I came in last night" but I got so fascinated I stayed all the way through.

And I'm glad I did. While the laughter was still echoing from the fun the Juniors had poked at the ineffectuality of clubwomen, Jackie Moffett asked for the registrar's report. "There were 43," came the prompt answer.

"And can you break that down into clubs for us?" asked Jackie. There was a pause, a gulp, and a small voice: "I lost the paper." It really did sound like part of the script and everybody roared again.

Which made a delightful way to end a very happy party. You would have loved the hats. If there had been a prize, the Barrett women would have taken the one for having the most and brightest flowers, which is really saying something.

County Club Federation Comes Of Age; To Continue Scholarship, Senior Award

The Monroe County Federation of Women's Clubs celebrated its 21st birthday at their Spring conference at Greenview Guest Farm on Wednesday night with the state president as guest speaker and the first two county presidents as honored guests.

Also honored was Carol Moll, the federation's Girl-of-the-Year, and Miss Carol Hillyard, their scholarship girl, now completing her junior year at East Stroudsburg State College. The federation voted to continue both projects, and also planned a county-wide project to raise funds.

500 Clubwomen Get A Lot Done In Communities

Monroe County's 500 members of the Federated Women's Clubs chalked up an impressive record of achievement over the past year according to the reports of the five presidents at the Spring county meeting this week.

The Woman's Club of the Stroudsburgs with 192 members contributed to all agencies, sponsored the Clearing House Center and the Child Health Center, entered the Teachers Award contest, and to CARE for Mexico. Two members are holding political office and 16 members took part in the county survey for the White House Conference on Children and Youth. Their current project is selling note paper and trays with the Mansion House pictured on them.

The Junior Women's Club with 106 members had an estimated income of $1,600 contributed to local charities. They send cookies each month to the County Home and sponsored a Valentine party there. They entered the Vogue Sewing Contest, took part in the Penn State conference, and their goal is $800 for the Bazaar to be held this Saturday.

The Progressive Women's Club of Saylorsburg has 91 members, and assumed responsibility for all major welfare drives in their area: Community Chest, Red Cross, Cancer, T. B. and March of Dimes. Their Drama Group was a new project this year along with a circulating library for club members. Their programs stressed the spiritual aspects of life.

The Stroud Community Club with 64 members realized $70 from their various projects. They plan to present a table radio to the County Home where they also sponsor birthday parties. Approximately 20 children will be sent to the Salvation Army Children's Camp this summer. They participated in the county scholarship fund, the Women's Medical College, Meals for Millions, Penny Art Fund and local charities.

The Barrett Community Club with 45 members raised approximately $922.84 through three project teams. They supported Mental Health and all social charities and contributed to the county scholarship fund, Barrett Welfare Fund, Children's Christmas Party, and the Pre-School Center which they sponsor.

Juniors Host To 125 Guests

Some 125 members and guests were served refreshments following the Mother-Senior Night of the Junior Women's Club this week. Mrs. Warren Mikels and Mrs. William Morgan presided at the Springtime tea table.

The refreshment committee, headed by Mrs. Nelson Lightner and Mrs. Jean Sheeley included Miss Giovanna DeRenzi, Mrs. Glen Detrick, Mrs. Richard Krueger, Mrs. Richard Hammond, Mrs. Stanley Grace, Mrs. Bruce Price, Mrs. Richard Smith and Mrs. Donald Brink.

MILK DRESSING
Don't forget that salad dressing adds to the nutrients of a meal. For family fare, it's a good idea to make one occasionally of undiluted evaporated milk, adding lemon juice or vinegar, sugar, salt, pepper and other seasonings.

Pretty garbanzo for fish; cross thin strips of pimiento over lemon slices and put capers in the center where the strips meet. Complements the flavor of the fish!

Mrs. Samuel O. Wells III, past president of the Woman's Club of the Stroudsburgs, and a member of the state board was elected as president and will succeed Mrs. Stephen Moffett of the Barrett Club who has completed a two-year term as president.

Other officers elected included: Mrs. H. J. Pine Jr., vice president; Mrs. Robert Payne, second vice president; Mrs. John Wolf, recording secretary; Mrs. William Morgan, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Frank Talasz, treasurer.

They were installed by Mrs. Walter Wilmarth, northeastern district vice president, who also presented a gift to Mrs. Moffett from her county board.

In a pre-dinner talk, Mrs. Wilmarth pointed out that the northeastern district gave $40,795.02 to welfare this year.

Mrs. Brown Goes To Washington
A first-hand report of the President's White House Conference on Children and Youth just completed in Washington, D. C., was given by the State President, Mrs. Earle A. Brown.

As one of the 7,603 participating delegates, she described the workings of the giant group with the general assemblies broken down into forums and then into workshops of about 30 each so that each delegate had a chance to be heard.

All of the clubs in the state, she reported, had enrolled in the Community Service projects contest serving in their own communities.

A birthday cake, marking the 21st birthday of the club, was cut by Mrs. Brown. Mrs. LeRoy Koehler, first county president, and Mrs. A. A. Holbrook, her successor, were also seated at the speaker's table.

Climax of the meeting was the musical comedy "Call Me Madame President," repeated to another standing ovation by the Junior Women's Club cast.

The Progressive Women's Club of Saylorsburg was host for the dinner and had arranged special name cards bearing Spring birds and flowers for all of the 43 delegates representing the five member clubs.

Galambos Boy To Be Baptized

Charles Edward Galambos, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Galambos of 251 Austin Drive, Fairless Hills, Pa., will be baptized at 12:30 o'clock on Palm Sunday afternoon in Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church, East Stroudsburg. Rev. William F. Wunder, Grace Church pastor, will administer the sacrament. Charles was born on November 29, 1959, in Trenton, New Jersey, and his mother is the former Myrna Donna Spangler of East Stroudsburg. Miss Barbara Galambos, paternal aunt of Charles, will serve as baptismal sponsor with the parents.

SAVES ON DISHES
It is perfectly safe to store part of a can of food not used in the original container. Because nowadays the inside of the container is lacquered, even an acid food such as tomatoes will not take on a metallic taste when stored this way for a few days.

Think of this the next time you have to saw wood: Paul Searls, using a buck saw, once cut through a 32-inch log in one minute and 26.4 seconds.

Carol Ann Moll, Girl-Of-Year, Earned Her Title

The extent of Carol Moll's community service was the deciding factor in her selection as the Girl of the Year by the judges for the Monroe County Federation of Women's Clubs.

Carol, a senior at Polk Two-High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moll of Kresgeville. She is an active member of the 4-H Club, of the Riding Club, and was chosen as delegate to the United Nations in 1959, sent by the Odd Fellows Lodge.

She has spoken on her impressions of the UN at the Lions Club, Parent - Teachers Assn., school assembly, and the Odd Fellows.

She is also a member of the Salem United Church of Christ and is president of its Youth Fellowship.

Mrs. Edward C. Hess, county chairman, in presenting her at the annual spring meeting, pointed out that the decision had been a difficult one with all of the candidates from the respective schools offering scholarship, leadership, and activity in many fields.

Carol, who will be valedictorian of her graduating class, ranked in the first 10 percent of the nation's college board entrants. She has already received the American Legion Aux. award as the most all-around girl and the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizenship award.

Her activities since junior high school have included the band, glee club, student council, cheer leader and gym team. In high school she added the school paper in her junior year and the year book in her senior year. She was in the class play and is a member of the Future Homemakers of America.

Carol, who was accompanied by her parents and her principal, Harry Young, plans to attend East Stroudsburg State College with a view to becoming a teacher.

CAN'T WAIT COACH—With the season opener only two days away, John Brunner, who will work the first game, doesn't have time to wait for a mound to be built. So the East Stroudsburg State College right hander warms up while the mound is being completed. George Ockershausen, coach and construction foreman supervises at left. (Staff Photo by MacLeod)

Brunner Faces Lincoln

Warriors Open Saturday; Drills Improve Hitting

EAST Stroudsburg State College, stressing batting drills for the past week, opens its baseball season at Lincoln University Saturday.

The Warriors managed only two hits against Moravian in a practice game a week ago and since then coach George Ockershausen has been running two batting cages daily.

And the work has paid off says Ockershausen. All of Warriors have been rapping the ball well, with Ernie Howe, John Brunner and Walt Snyder getting the best wood on the ball.

Brunner To Start

Brunner, a senior right hander, will open on the mound Saturday. "But since we have a league game against Millersville on Tuesday," says Ockershausen,

"I won't work Brunner too many innings. I want to get a look at all my pitchers."

Joe Pusateri will work behind the plate in the opener, with Al Stockholm at first, Howe at second, Red Leinert at shortstop and Al Miller at third base.

Ockershausen is not certain who will work in the outfield. Four flycatchers, Snyder, Joe Bean, Dick Zimmer, and Barry Wray, have made the biggest impression in pre-season work-outs.

Other Hurlers
Three pitchers besides Brunner, Tommy Barrow and Bob Genesmer, both right handed and Jerry Anuszewski, a southpaw will make the Lincoln trip. Weldon Webb, a lanky fireballer, who has been bothered with back trouble, will probably be left at home.

Ockershausen has pared the squad to 30 men but is only allowed to take 20 players, including coaches on road trips.

The Warriors, who play only five home games, do not make their first East Stroudsburg appearance until May 11 against Bloomsburg.

Recommendations For Athletic Contests

A LEHIGH VALLEY Area Athletic Study Committee has come up with some sound recommendations for the scheduling of high school athletic events.

The group sent questionnaires to 30 schools to help determine the number of contests for each sport which should be allowed. Football teams, the group felt, should be allowed eight games, with 20 games for basketball. The committee recommended 12 meets for wrestling, eight for track, 10 for swimming. Baseball got a 12-game nod.

The group also favored Tuesday afternoon basketball games. The afternoon games it was theorized, would allow the participants to be home by 7:30 if the game began at 4:30.

Afternoon Games Mean Missed Classes

But with most area schools in session until 3:30 it would be impossible to start a game at 4:30 unless the players were excused from a class or two.

Then the question arises, is it better to have the players miss class time or study time?

From all angles it appears that any sporting event on a school day ruins scholastic endeavors for the day.

If it is held in the afternoon, the players are too tired to study effectively at night. A night time game leaves the participants too tense and excited to study in the afternoon.

Football Scheduling The Easiest

The problem can be solved easily during the football season by scheduling all games on Saturday afternoon or night. The scheduling of basketball games presents probably the biggest headache.

Games must be arranged not only to suit the schools involved but also to afford parents a chance to attend. Friday nights conflict with the shopping tradition, leaving Saturday the prime time.

But with a 20-game schedule recommended, two games must be booked a week. More and more schools are leaning toward Tuesday afternoon games, as the lesser of scholastic evils.

Wrestling, Swimming Add To Booking Woes

Schools that have wrestling and swimming programs along with a basketball set-up may have to fall back on a Saturday all-sports day to relieve the burden.

Triple header events, with swimming and wrestling in the afternoon and basketball at night, may be the answer. East Stroudsburg State College runs its program under this set-up and has found it successful.

The student spectators suffer when a school does not consolidate its athletic events.

Many parents limit their children to one night out a week. The student is then faced with the problem of choosing swimming on Monday, basketball on Tuesday, wrestling on Wednesday and a church or some similar meeting on Thursday.

East Stroudsburg and Stroud Union High Schools are not too far from wrestling teams and East Stroudsburg with its new pool, is in line for a swimming team.

The question is then how thin can the student be spread in athletics and still perform in the classroom?

Bangor Faces P'burg Today

BANGOR HIGH School, a 9-2 loser in its opening baseball game Wednesday, meets Phillipsburg today at home at 3:30 p.m.

Ken Smith, is expected to pitch for the Slayers, while Duane LaBar, who pitched the opener and banded a lofty homerun, will work in the outfield.

Bangor is the only area high school team playing today. East Stroudsburg opens at Easton Saturday and Stroud Union gets underway Wednesday.

Venturi Skids To 73

Palmer Leads Master's With Help Of Ruling

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, who usually saves his best for the last, got off to a tremendous start in the 24th Masters Golf Tournament Thursday helped by a favorable ruling on the same hole where his strongest rival, Ken Venturi, came a cropper.

Palmer, the 1958 Masters winner from Ligonier, Pa., shot an opening round of 33-46, five under par for the big, crowded Augusta national course, to take a two-stroke lead at the end of the first day.

Venturi, who had threatened with a 31 on the front nine, faded to an over-par 73 finish.

It was a ruling on the 12th hole, a short pitchover a creek, that set Venturi stumbling. On the same hole, Palmer was given the benefit of a free lift and made his par while Venturi hacked out a double bogey five. From there on Ken was just about sunk and he took bogeys on four of the remaining six holes while blowing to a 42 on the last nine.

Afterward Venturi said he thought the ruling made by PGA Tournament Director Ed Carter was erroneous, although it was too late to do anything about it. The ball hit the green, skipped over and lodged in a hole in the bank which Venturi thought was made by another player. Carter told him he wasn't entitled to lift the embedded ball because it had hit the green first.

Palmer's tee shot on the same hole was short and was embedded at the top of a trap in soft ground. He was allowed to lift the ball and place it in a playable position.

Two strokes behind Palmer at the finish were four players who hadn't figured much in the pre-tournament calculations — former Champion Claude Harmon, Fred Hawkins, former GA Champion Dow Finsterwald, and Jay Hebert.

Here's "Inside" Story Of A Baseball As The Major Leagues Get Set To Play

PLAY BALL!—And here is what they play with, and how it's made. The baseball season opens officially April 12 when the National league begins. Both major leagues use the same ball. A ball club uses from 600 to 800 dozen baseballs in a season.

THE average fan will focus his attention on a baseball when the National league opens April 12 and the President of the United States tosses out that first ball for the American league opener a week later.

Or, this same fan may talk about a baseball when there's an argument about whether a "rabbit" is hiding inside the baseballs used by the major leagues.

Of course, anyone who gets an autographed baseball will take a close look at it.

But, how many fans know the "inside" story of a baseball?

Mud Used
What kind of mud is used by American league umpires to rub the gloss from a shiny new ball?

Does the American league use a livelier baseball than the National league?

How many baseballs are needed by a major league club to finish a season?

What is a baseball made of?

Before a game starts, the umpires rub the gloss off new balls. That's because the players would do it anyway, so this saves some game time. American league umpires use a dirt-and-water compound for the job. They carry jars of mud reputedly scooped by divers from the bottom of the Delaware river.

Both leagues use the same baseball. The A. G. Spalding & Bros. company makes the balls for the majors. The American league uses the "Reach" ball while the National takes the "Spalding" baseball. The only difference between them is the printing on the cover.

Large Quantity
Ball clubs require anywhere from 600 to 800 dozen baseballs for a season's play. From 30 to 50 baseballs—or about three to five an inning—are used in the early days, the ball weighed 6½ ounces and measured 10½ inches around, but today the official ball must be not less than 5 ounces nor more than 5¼ ounces in weight and must be from 9 to 9¼ inches in circumference.

The first baseballs were all tightly-wound yarn. A large center of rubber was added for distance. Now the ball contains a cushion cork center. Before this standardization process the home team had its choice of whether it wanted a so-called "dead" ball or a "live" one.

Wool Wrapping
This regulation baseball is generally made by wrapping wool and twine tightly around a core of hard rubber and cork and then covering this center with tightly-stretched horsehide.

The cork for the balls is said to come from Spain or Portugal. It takes more than 100 hand-stitched double stitches for the cover, so a player can hardly "knock the cover" off the ball.

The cork pellet is covered with halves of black rubber and a red rubber ring is placed between the halves.

Long Stretch
There is enough yarn in one baseball to go from home plate to second base eight and one-half times. A baseball uses about 121 yards of gray wool, 53 yards of fine gray wool, 45 yards of white wool, 150 yards of white cotton, coatings of rubber cement and the horsehide. The baseballs used by both leagues are made and tested under strict control qualifications. The temperature and humidity in the plant is kept uniform so that moisture or heat won't affect the official standards of weight, shape and size.

That's the "inside" story of baseball.

Missionaries To Talk At Hollisterville

Working mainly among the Conibo tribe along the Ucayali River in the lowland jungles of Peru, the Russells seven months ago discovered a new tribe of wild Indians who had never before seen a white man. They were located on a remote headland near the Brazilian border, having been spotted from the air by missionaries. An eleven-day journey up a small stream took the Russells to the tribe, wearing sticks through their noses. The women often kill their babies, since they don't want to be bothered with them.

The public is invited to join in the service and hear the missionaries.
